The System not New in Principle. The system of instruction by object teaching, as it has been called, but which we should prefer to call the Development System, is nothing new in principle or purpose; for it is fully carried out in Natures teachings in the early years of childhood; and it is the system upon which nearly all valuable knowledge has been accumulated in the progressive civilization of the race. It is to a degree, however, new in its application to the methods of early school instruction, in which we think we shall show we have most departed from Nature and from enlightened experience. 2. Natures System of Teaching. It is known that the child, from one to four years of age, acquires knowledge far more rapidly than at any subsequent period of life. In these three years it has attained great proficiency in a language of peculiar intricacy, speaking it with considerable fluency, and mastering many of its most difficult idioms; it has learned to recognize, and give the names, and know many of the qualities and uses of a thousand objects; and this it has done by keeping the senses of touch, taste, hearing, sight, and smell - the perceptive faculties - in almost constant and pleasurable activity.
