Dog Ear Publishing, LLC. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 288 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 1.0in. Graduating high school and going off to college: theres no way a former boozier and hellion, aka Cam Lantuzzi, would ever get that chance But Cam found a way, and a fresh start for the young outspoken liberal might be his ticket to happiness. Houston Central College is only about an hour away from his conservative hometown of Kinsey, Texas, yet worlds apart in tradition, diversity, and ideas. Especially ideas like dating someone from a different race. A slim African American girl named Randess Houghton plays the part. Intrigued by the outspoken Cam, she wants to know more. So do others, and a few of the curious onlookers arent too accepting of their budding romance. The pressure from parents, friends, and bystanders begins to mount. Can the couple handle it More importantly, can they stay safe in the grips of a racist groups misguided hate Hate much more serious than a passerbys condemning glance. Cams earlier years in Kinsey were a mess. He was a troublemaker. Wrecking a car and skipping school were all in a days work. He felt a duty to flaunt his dislike for authority. There wasnt a confrontation hed shy away from. Follow him as he remembers some of these fool-hearted adventures. He finally finds a way to straighten up, and when he does, he realizes there is a much smarter way to rebel. He has gifts-abilities that can provide an escape from orthodox Kinsey. Once in college, he finds a progressive set of people who do appreciate his gifts: writing, reading, and spouting politically charged rhetoric. The past is behind him. Unfortunately, Cam realizes that some things about himself havent changed. Delve into an agitators mind and see if...
